New England and the Tariff.

IT is quite the fashion among our Democratic politicians-whose highest conception of statesmanship is to foment sectional jealousies and discords-to represent a protective tariff as peculiarly a New England measure, and on the strength of that representation to endeavor to arouse against her the prejudices of other portions of the country. Now, it is true that New England statesmen, being intelligent, far-seeing, and national in their views, are, as a general rule, favorable to the principle of protection; but it is also equally true, that no portion of the country could so easily afford to get along without protection as New England. Her people are frugal, ingenious, and enterprising. They have been essentially a manufacturing people for nearly half a century. Her manufactures are now well established, and have outgrown the condition wherein protection could be of vital consequence to them. Hence, so far as New England is concerned, the tariff might be fixed strictly upon a revenue basis, and she would probably not complain; although, as we have before remarked, the truly comprehensive and national spirit of her representatives leads them to foster that system which is most favorable to growth and development of the whole country. But we observe that her leading statesmen are not disposed to any longer allow Democratic demagogues the privilege of representing the highly protective duties that the present Congress is imposing upon foreign goods as a New England measure. They emphatically disclaim it.

Thus Senator Wilson, of Massachusetts, yesterday spoke agains: the Tariff bill now pending in the House. He said it was a Western measure, and Massachusetts was satisfied with the present tariff, and ne would vote against the bill if sent to the Senate without modification. Massachusetts had protection enough. They had enough of this thing of putting on heavy tariffs to protect the iron and other interests of Pennsylvania and the West, and then charging it all to New England. Mr. HENDRICKS asked Mr. Wilson who was the author of the House Tariff bill? Mr. WILSON said Mr. MORBILL reported the bill, but men from the Northwest, in the wool interest, originated it. Whoever said the present tariff came from New England said what was not true.

And in the House of Representatives, in the discussion upon the Tariff bill, Mr. PIKE, of Maine, argued that this was a Western Taruf bill. gotten up for the benefit of the West, merging into Pennsylvania, and leaving New England out in the cold-which was careless whether the bill was passed now, a year hence, or never.

Now, we do not apprehend that the New England Members of Congress will be found voting against the present tariff bill in toto, although they may and doubtless will strive to modify some of its features; but they are evidently determined that the country shall understand that it is not a New England measure—that, at least, the iron interests of Pennsylvania and Missouri, the wool interests of Ohio and Michigan, the lumber interests of New York and Wisconsin; and the grain and cattle interests of the West generally, are quite as vitally concerned for protection as the manufacturing interests of New England. The sectional Democratic politicians are to be deprived of the privilege of harping upon New England in connection with the tariff.

It is well that the true bearings of the tariff question should be more clearly understood by all classes. Protection is something not specially and exclusively related to manufactures, but bearing upon industry generally. By securing the diversification of industry, it builds up every interest-agriculture, the mechanic arts, railroads, mining, etc., as well as manufactures. The farmer is as much interested in it as the miner, the wool-grower as the wool-manufacturer, the lumberman as the builder, the railread company as the manufacturing company. In this broad and truthful, view protection is a national policy, diversifying, building up, and rendering permanent the industrial pursules of the whole country.

Amendment of the Pacific Railroad Bill Signed.

WE are glad to see that the President has signed the bill allowing the Union Pacific Railroad Company, Eastern Division, to construct their road due west from Fort Riley, Kansas, up the Smoky Hill river, towards Denver. This removes the last obstacle in the way of the speedy construction of the road, and we look to see unbroken railroad communication from Philadelphia to Denver within the next two years at furthest, and perhaps before 1868.

IMPORTANT DECISION .- The decision made by Judge Bowrs, Chief Justice of Maryland, in regard to a suit brought against a white man for assault and battery upon a negro, is one of great importance, and contrasts most favorably with the action of certain judges in the Southern States. The plea filed by the lawyer for the man Somers, was that a negro could not give testimony against a white man. No effort was made to deny the assault, but the proceedings were all based on the doctrine that the black has no rights that a white man is bound to respect. The undoubted legality of the Civil Rights bill should settle every such case, and when a compliance with its provisions is refused, we must impute it not to ignorance, but to a desire to avoid obedience to what is now the supreme law of the land. Let such a punishment as that meted out to Justice READ, of Louisiana, who was arrested for refusing to administer those laws which he had sworn faithfully to fulfil, be inflicted on all who refuse to comply with the provisions of the Civil Rights bill.

F THE Pension Bill was yesterday adopted in the House by a vote of 71 to 57. The vote was not s partisan one in its character, Radical Speech of General John A. Logan. | FINANCE AND COMMERCE. | No man in the West stands higher than General JOHN A. LOGAN, of Illinois. As an orator and a statesman he has long been in the front rank. As a soldier on the battle-field none excelled him in courage, enthusiasm, and all the great qualities of successful leadership. He was one of the few civilians who, in our late war, achieved high distinction as a military commander, and sustained himself throughout. The position which such a man-orator, statesman, soldiertakes upon the great questions of the day is significant of the drift of the popular mind.

General Logan, until the commencement of the Slaveholders' Repellion, was a member of the Democratic organization. He then torsook it, and has continued to act ever since with the Union party. A few days ago he made a speech, three hours and a half long, at Cairo, Illinois. It was radical, eloquent, logical, unanswerable.

"The proposed amendment to the Constitution was all right," he said, "because it loyal men who have never faltered in their attachment and devotion to free the Government cannot properly administer the Government, traitors need not try, and are not entitled to any increased representation in the Government which they tried hard to destroy. It has been said treason must be made odious and traitors must be punished; consequently, we cannot offer a reward for treason."

Like all the Western men, he was out and out in favor of the "Mongor Doctrine," asserting that it was simply cowardice on the part of the United States to allow a European monarchy to be established upon our sister republic of

He adverted to the Fenian movement, and said he could not for the life of him see any good reason for being so particularly enthusiastic in enforcing the neutrality laws, since Eng. land has proved that she did not care a straw for them when it was not for her interest to do so. If the Fenians wished to establish Irish nationality and independence, in God's name throw no obstacle in their way; but Irishmen must not forget that to deserve American sympathy and assistance, they must act with the party in favor of universal liberty.

We believe General Logan is expected to visit Pennsylvania during the coming campaign. Should he do so, he will meet with such a reception as his great talents and distinguished services render p eculiarly appropriate.

MEXICO.-ROBERT DALE OWEN, in a letter in regard to Mexican adairs, thus pertinently sums up the entire policy of the United States Government:-

1. The Republican Government of Mexico is recognized by the United States as the Government of the people's choice.

2. The Empire was imposed on Mexico by force, against the will of the people.

3. The United States deny the right of any foreign power forcibly to impose a monarchy on any established republic. 4. The United States will never recognize the so-called Emperor of Mexico. 5. The French troops are to be immediately withdrawn in good laith, and without any attempt before their withdrawal to consolidate Imperial institutions in Mexico.

6. We make no stipulation or condition con-tingent on such withdrawal, except that we will abide by the principle of non intervention.
7. In agreeing to abide by the principle of non-intervention, we are to be understood as stipulating only this—that when the French withdraw we will ourselves respect the self-established sovereignty and independence of

Here is the whole Mexican policy in a nutshell.

FENIAN ADDRESS .- We see General SWEENEY has issued another address to the Brotherhood. The Fenian leaders remind us strongly of "Toots," who, when there was no one to write to, wrote letters to himself with all the dignity and formality of an official correspondence. Such is the style of our sons of Erm. It matters not whether they have anything to say, or if anybody will read what they do say. But, with a wild desire to appear in print, they issue addresses for the sake of addressing, and make up in length what is wanting in ideas,

COPYRIGHT. -An effort is being made to secure the extension of the Copyru; ht law, not only to the lifetime of the author, but also to that of his or her children while they are minors. Such a change is one only consistent with simple justice. A book is the property of the writer as much as any real estate; and why it cannot be extended for a short time, at least, we cannot perceive.

LANE REDIVIVUS .- A despatch from Leavenworth, dated yesterday, asserts that General LANE is alive and in a fair way to recover. We do not believe there is another man in the United States, besides JIM LANE, who could have survived a bullet through his brain. The "grim Chieftain" will be grimmer than ever, if he gets over this.

NOT DEAD .- It appears that Hon, R. BARNWELL RPETT, of South Carolina, is still in the land of the living. It was another RHETT who came to an untimely end. As his announced death will be a good excuse for his reappearing before the public, we may look for a political card at an early day.

THE New York Tribune is indignant at Antioch College because the faculty would not allow a temale to deliver a thesis in full bloomer costume. The Tribune rides its hobbies to death, and in this and many other crochets is not only shead of time, but shead of all common

The two Houses have compromised in regard to the tax on cotton. The Senate tavored five per cent, and the House two per cent. It at present has been fixed at three per cent. It can easily stand such a tax without injuring the crop, or turning planters from its cultivation.

JOHN MITCHEL, in his last letter to the New York Daily News, terms ALFRED TENNYSON "a driveller." The high literary standing of the News makes such an attack extremely dangerous to the Poet Laureste's reputation.

"Our flour market closes dull, with a dec ining tendency. Beceipts for the week, 17 431 bbls, being an increase of about 6.00 bbls, over last week. The decline on fine and superfine grades is aligh 25 on the outside rates prevailing last week, and the supply largly in excess of the demand. There is no shipping demand for rates prevailing last week, and the supply larg ly in excess of the demand. There is no shipping demand for these qualities at any price and considerable quantities have been a seed in store—not from any unwil inguess on the part of receivers to see a but from their inability to get even an offer. Medium grades are 506/15c lower, and close very dult. Shippers have withdrawn from the market, and the only demand is the requirements of the coast order trade, which is very limited. To effect sales of round lots, a larre concession would have to be made. On good, choice grades there has been but little talling off in price, on account of the scant supply. With the advent of the new crop we, however, look for a material decline. New wheat has commenced coming into market some 4000 bushels having been sold during the past three das at excessive rates, with a considerable weakening ofprice at the coast, and as soon as the offerings increase to the amount of the requirements of our city milts which with good weather with be in a few days, we anticipate a very material failing off in rices, with which flour most necessarily sympathize. How much the failing off will be we do not venture to predict; but we would advise great caution on the part of our riends in nurchasing wheat at present rates. The crop in this vicinity is unsurpassed in quality and quantity, and the renorts from Central and Northern Hilhois and Southern Iowa are much more invorable than they were a fortnight since, the unusually favorable weather of the last two weeks having brought out the crop amazingly, and with the continuance of good weather, as the harvest advances northward we have hopes that an average crop, of better than average quality, will be secured."

THE KINGS OF HANOVER AND SAXONY .- The following are sketches of the sovereigns whose territories have been so suddenly ravaged by Prussia:—George V, of Hanover, succeeded his father in 1851; he is about forty-five years of age, and married to a daughter of the Duke of Saxe-Altenburg, by whom he has a gon and two Altenburg, by whom he has a son and two daughters. His father was the Duke of Cumberland, a son of George III, of England. King John, of Saxony, 65, is a son of Prince Maximilian and the Princess Theresa, of Sax my. His consort is a Princess of Bavaria, by whom he has had three sons and six daughters. One of the latter, recently deceased, was Grand Duchess of Tuscany. He succeeded his brother, who died, leaving no children, in 1854. He is a Catholic, his ancestors having formerly adopted that suited an order to be succeeded. that religion in order to be eligible to the crown of Poland. The present Elector of Hesse-Cassel is Frederick William I, who descends from Henry I, the common ancestor of the three families of Hesse. In 1831 he married morganatically the divorced wife of a Prussian officer. His successor is Prince Frederick, one of his cousins. The pre-sent Elector distinguished himself by his reactionary ardor in 1849, during the ministry of the rather notorious Hassenpfug.
